HONGKONG, FRIDAY, MAR. 12, 1880. IT is not often that the public are favoured with a Gaol Report of such surpassing interest as that which we reproduced last evening over the signature of "M. S. Tonnochy, Superintendent." The refreshing element introduced cannot fail to please as well as to arrest the attention of our readers; and those whodevote much time to a consideration of such matters will feel great obligations to Mr Tonnochy for having thrown in an interesting polemical vein into what generally is a mere dry matter-of-fact statement. Mr Tonnochy's style is not lacking in smoothness and grace, and it may be expected that, under the able and skilful hands of Mr Hennessy, his reports may become even more interesting and captivating than that now before us. It must be admitted that the statistics and the "letter"-which by the way, the report is styled this venr-coincide with wonderful accuracy, and the manner with which everything is so managed as to throw a radiance over Mr Hennessy's criminal policy-or, to speak more correctly, the policy of Mr Hennessy towards criminals-is highly creditable to some one; assuming that Mr Hennessy has had nothing to do with the revisal of the proof sheets. If Mr Tonnochy has "engineered" the "letter" and returns solely from his own original ideas of what a Gaol report ought to be; then H.E. the Governor can count upon one official at least who has a great admiration for his peculiar ideas and sees "eye to eye" with him on criminal matters. The proposed effect of the endeavours made in this report is, that the opposition of the community to Mr Hennessy's policy was a mistake, and that its results show that both he and his policy are right after all. The community can afford to congratulate the Executive and themselves that things are no worse than they are. Having been checked in his headlong career of sentimental namby-pambyism, the deportation rules having been saved as if by fire," and the deterrent of flogging having been only diluted from public to private, "we rub along," as the saying is. It is to be credited to Mr Hennessy that, having got the abandonment of old landmarks, he has been successful, through improvements in the Police and the introduction of longer sentences for old offenders, in getting back to the state in which the Colony has been before. While giving Mr Hennessy credit for this, it will become the duty of the unofficial members of the Levislative Council on belial of the public, to count the cost. The new

Colony into a state of muddle and insecurity by indiscreet edministration, and by a too hasty and (as the community thought and still think) unwise system adopted of giving long sentences _" say seven years," as the report puts

The work was commenced in 1872, and was to be finished at a cost of about $14,000,000, though the outginal contract called for only $10,000,000. There is no doubt that it will take all the Italian trade of Germany, Swoden, Denmark, but perhaps, also, much of liolland, Belgium, Great Britain, and Tunnel is the Mt. Cenis, completed in 1871 at an expenditure of fourteen years' labour and $15,000,000. Some experiments recently carried on by two or three Austrian and German horticulturists have, says the Globs, brought into notice an almost forgotten plant which was introduced into Europe from China nearly whose products, have been undeservedly lest sight of. This is the Soja hispida, a species of legiminous plant, somewhat resembling in labit and appearance the well-known pea. Unlike the latter, however, it has two distinct uses-industrial as well as alimentary. It is highly prized in China and Japan, and is said, indeed, to played in good style, and are a credit to take its scientific title from the Japanese name of a sauce-soois—which is made from its seeds. The seeds are very similar to a "marrow-fat" pea, but contain a large quantity of oll, which is either pressed out of them or boiled out in process of cooking the seeds for the table, which is effected by simply throwing them into boiling water when the outer skin bursts, and floats to the surface, together withm quantity of oll, both the oil and the husks being skimmed off together. These may be either used as cattle food, or the oil may be separated and employed for various purposes, while the husks are still valuable as a feeding stuff or as a manure. The peas are boiled for about twenty minutes, and furnish a dish which is highly reliahed, not only by the Celestials, but by many Europeans who have tasted it. It is said to resemble in flavour the green pea, but lacks its sweet taste. The boiled soja is also prepared as a cake and as a sauce, being fermented for the latter purpose, and salt, pepper, &c., being added. The sauce has a high reputation among the Chinese and Japanese, not merely as a condiment, but as a medicinal agent. Chemical analysis of the seeds shows them to be very rich in proteine. The oil is available for many uses—for burning in lamps, or even as a substitute for olive oil, Being somewhat of a siccative nature it is not adopted as a lubricant, but is for that in the manufacture of paints and in other similar industrial arts. Finally, to compieto, the list of virtues of this Celestia pea, the haulm grows an excellent fodder for cattle and horses. The plant seems well adapted for cultivation in many parts of Europe, and would probably do well Ireland. It remains to be seen whether the agricultural success of the German experimentalists will result in its general acceptance in Europe.

phantom in its life as in its atmosphere.

Emulating the growth of Jonah's gourd, the little Spanish embarcaderoffor hides and tallow has, within a quarter of a century, sprung into a nervous life and existence that can not be paralleled on the face of the earth. Ever since the first showing of the golden grains there has been, from the very nature of things, a standing invitation to the wanderer and the adventurer from every clime, and country, and condition. De sperate in their fortunes elsewhere, and restlessly champing the bit of circumstance, thousands upon thousands of the venturesome have drifted out to this western fringe of the new continent, from the quarters whence the four winds blow. To find what? A city of prodigal sons; a great dormitory of bachelors; a town with too much oxygen in the air. A place where the universal passion to get suddenly rich is intensified in every human being that treads the streets; where rumors float up and down; where the stranger within the gates is brought in close contact with men, who, whatever may be their diversity of gilts, are profoundly in earnest in accomplishing their own ends and purposes, and in breaking down these that conflict with their own; men whose key note is competition, of the crushing sort. They find a glamour of excitement in which shadow is often taken for substance, noise for reality; a place where big fortunes are not scarce, but those that seek them abundant; where men look hard at each other's gains; where the human machine runs at high pressure-strong excitement feeding the furnace, the hand of selfishness grasping the lever, and the fingers of greed clutching hard at the throttlevalve. And yet it is this whirlpool of life that has builded here so famous a city; a city that has now not only the credit of having segregated the most daring business schemes, but the re-A clever observer of Shanghai society | putation of being the insane asylum of once said.
